

ECHO PARENTING & EDUCATION

presents a landmark conference

CHANGING THE PARADIGM: TRAUMA AND THE DEVELOPING CHILD

February 25-26, 2014

The California Endowment
1000 N. Alameda Street
Los Angeles 90012

Highlights:

Developmental Trauma

Janina Fisher
Beth Kalish-Weiss
Elaine Karas
Hala Khouri
Bette Lamont
Leslie Ross
A Window Between Worlds

Nonviolent Child-raising

Ruth Beaglehole
Patricia Lakatos
Jennifer Johnston-Jones
Eileen Paris

Developmental Trauma-Informed Nonviolent Systems

Elizabeth Eastlund
Gabriella Grant
Susan Hess
Adriana Molina
Katie Tyler

Dr. Janina Fisher

Ruth Beaglehole

Hear the best in the field gathered together for the first time under the banner of developmental trauma.

Receive tools for practice.

Learn to use Trauma-Informed Nonviolent Standards of Care so you can create systems-level change for traumatized families and children.

There is something for everyone -

- art therapy
- yoga
- staff wellness
- trauma resiliency models used for international disaster relief and more...

Have you heard the term “Developmental Trauma?”

Not many people have since this is new language and heralds a shift in understanding that many of our physical, mental and social problems are actually manifestations of the developmental effects of trauma.

At Echo, we have long understood that some forms of child-raising actually create childhood toxic stress.

We are pleased to be partnering with experts in the field of developmental trauma to address both trauma and the protective and mitigating effects of safe, stable nurturing relationships - the goal of our nonviolent child-raising philosophy.

Register online at www.echoparenting.org

Funded in part by  The John Gogian Family Foundation

left to right: Gabriella Grant, Bette Lamont, Joel Andres, Elaine Miller-Karas and Eileen Paris